

8. PUBLIC INVOLVEMENT

Public participation is recognized as an integral part of the planning process. The public participation process for Transportation Conformity and other transportation plans, projects, and policies includes timely public notice, full public access to technical and policy information, opportunities for early and continuing involvement, and explicit consideration and response to public input.

Public participation strategies and procedures are designed to inform the public about transportation and air quality issues, provide opportunities to involve the public in the decision-making process and seek public and stakeholder input. Additionally, this process builds support among the public who are stakeholders in transportation investments. Public views and opinions are included in the final RTP/MTP and TIP documents.

The public meeting presentation was recorded and made available on the MPO’s website for public viewing and feedback. The public meeting date, location address, and link to the meeting’s agenda/recording are provided in Table 8-1.
